

ART OF COACHING PODCAST™ EPISODE 50 DAVID JOYCE: CREATIVITY IN COACHING – DOES IT HAVE A PLACE?

Regardless of the industry, skilled communication is vital. David and Brett discuss communication on a deeper level and ask what percentage of problems that leaders deal with may be communication related. In thinking about your own environment, how would you define skilled communication?

What challenges do you currently face as a communicator?

Why do you believe that the skill of listening and/or communication in general is often taken for granted?

According to David, which skills are MOST important in regards to becoming a better communicator?

What resources do you currently use to become a more skilled communicator/coach?

What are 2–3 examples of communication styles you use when leading others?

Do you look for resources in other industries? If so, which industries do you turn to?

Do you consider yourself to be a curious individual? Where does that stem from?

As coaches, when we leave our current environments we want to leave a positive legacy; however, how do you know when it's time to leave.

ABOUT

Join us as we dive more deeply into what it takes to change attitudes, outcomes & behaviors across a variety of world-class environments. Our guests include a wide range of professionals ranging from coaching, law enforcement, scientists, managers, military and entrepreneurs.

While I may originally be a strength and conditioning coach by trade- my work now spans across the corporate realm, military setting and beyond. If you work with people in any capacity and are fascinated by what makes them tick, this show is for you!

Each episode is packed with tactical insights as we prioritize providing you with key take-aways, instead mass produced "surface level" advice. Expect to be challenged, expect to be surprised and expect to maybe find a few laughs along the way as well.
